

SUPPORTING EMPLOYEES IN DISTRESS MENTAL HEALTH EMERGENCIES

Start here. A situation, observation or instinct tells you to be concerned about a colleague. Maybe you're unsure what to do, where to start or worry that you'll make things worse. Don't let that stop you from taking action. Use this decision tree to determine the next steps, and never hesitate to contact emergency services if unsure.

Is the employee experiencing:

Thoughts of suicide, medical emergency, severe effects of substance use, a severe psychotic state, or are they a danger to themselves, to others, or in need of immediate support?

What happens when I call 911 or UDPD?

A dispatcher will collect your information, assess if emergency response is required, and if so, dispatch a medical team or law enforcement to the person in distress. Law enforcement agencies, including UDPD, may utilize specially trained Crisis Intervention Training officers to de-escalate mental health emergencies.

What happens when I call 988?

988 is the new number for the National Suicide and Crisis Lifeline. Like 911, it can be dialed from any phone for access to emergency care. Your call will be routed to a local crisis center where a trained crisis counselor will listen, provide support and share resources if needed. While some safety and health issues may warrant a response from law enforcement and/or emergency medical, 98% of calls are resolved over the phone. Options for veterans and Spanish language are available.

What happens when I call ComPsych, UD's Employee Assistance Program provider?

When you call, you will speak with a master's or PhD-level counselor who will collect some general information about you and discuss your needs. The GuidanceConsultant will provide the name of a counselor who can assist you. You can then set up an appointment to speak with the counselor over the phone or schedule a face-to-face visit.

"I've noticed lately that you [have been down] ..."

Then say something like:
